Gay Fiesta Questions

Been to Gay Fiesta. Lots of fun. Had a good time. Now some constructive criticism.

1) Start the thing at 2:00 P.M. People in our community don't get up before noon on Sundays, and the crowd didn't start getting there until about 4 or 5 anyway.

2) Who were the Infidels, and why were they the guest act at Fiesta? I liked the music, but it wasn't what I would call "gay." The Village People were in Houston a week or two ago. Why don't you get them next year? I would really like to see them or someone popular in the bars. At least get someone we've heard of.

3) Who was in charge of the beer? You only had two beer booths (only one with draft), they ran out of two of the four kinds of draft by 4:00, and the inside booth didn't have any cold cans at 6:00. This was a major blunder, and needs to be fixed before anything else.

All things considered, I would give this Gay Fiesta a 6 on a scale of 1 to 10. Lets get it fixed, or expect smaller crowds next year.

We are a bunch of drunken, lazy, shallow idiots who have nothing better to do with ourselves than to take time out of our lives + write our whiny two-bits down on a piece of paper, carry it to the post office + pay to have it mailed to someone stupid enough to find it useful + go to the trouble + expense of printing + distribution.

Rome Strikes Again

A recent Rude Girl printed the Papal pronouncement of the intrinsic evil of homosexuality + wondered just what the Gay Catholic community would do with it. Well, we didn't have to wait long for our answer.

An encyclical is a policy letter written by the Roman Pontiff. The recent encyclical is titled "The Splendor of Truth." Pardon me while I vomit.

Blatantly, callously, and stupidly ignoring the ever-expanding universe of evidence that clearly indicates that homosexuality is just another natural expression of human sexuality — a fact every personally honest gay/lesbian knows — the encyclical declares, among other things, that homosexual acts are "intrinsically evil" (i.e. are naturally evil in and of themselves).

Then, in a defiant fit of childish foot-stamping, complete with threats of censure, threatening Catholic educators and theologians with the loss of their authority to teach, threatening the removal of support and the word "Catholic" from nonconforming institutions, and other threats, the Roman Pontiff warns those who do not agree to keep silent and not challenge his list of "evils."

Trusty Brother Rick came forward to try + justify the condemnation by a bit of double talk + some Pope bashing.

Who does he think the Pope is? Just some guy who decided to make homosexuality a sin? It's not like Orsonio Hall said Gays are going to hell, This is God's emissary on Earth + when he talks, you're supposed to listen.

So, again, why am I telling you this? If you are attending a church, any denomination, and that church teaches that you are "intrinsically evil," ABANDON IT! Do NOT compromise your humanity!

Haven't we been saying this all along?

Excuse me, but religion is not supposed to be what you want. So if you want something that your church, your bible, & your dad say 'no' to then your choices are ① obey or ② leave. You don't rationalize it away. You can't pick & choose how you obey.

Is Brother Rick trying to draw some sort of distinction between modern, bigoted religious practice & some sort of true Church or Christianity wherein gays & lesbians (here "queers") are accepted? Excuse me, but your god has always been a bastard — a violent, jealous, woman-hating, queer-hating, slavery + oppressing dictator who demands the surrender of will & of self. What's to love?

LOG CABIN REPUBLICANS

Excuse me—but isn't the Republican party the party of the religious/fundamentalist right, sexism, racism, homophobia, and other slight unpleasantnesses? I think it is. I think Ronald Reagan, Buchanan, Fallwell, Robertson, Bush, and Phyllis Schlafly are Republicans. Why on earth would a homosexual join the party that got so much mileage out of blaming guys for society's "ills"? Probably for the same reason there are "queer" Christians out there.
If you are for a gov't that keeps its hands off (as most people who are trying to "return their party to its roots"
say) then be a libertarian. Why try to bail out a ship that has, to all intents & purposes, already sunk?
If, on the other hand, you are a Republican because you are a rich bastard who has a "straight-acting"
boyfriend then you deserve to be held up to public ridicule. I will applaud the party when they unearth you.
"In the new third reich you'll be the first to go" (DKs). etc.

"By the year 2000
it will be impossible to get
agreement, anywhere in the
civilized world,
that it is not okay
to be lesbian or gay."

Is it just age, or does this sentence make no sense?
It's complex to the point of incomprehensibility. Is it positive or negative? Whose side are these people on? Why are they unable to express themselves? Must we add inarticulate to the list of community attributes, along with whiny, shallow, narcissistic, + useless? There are enough of those university gay student groups out there throwing parties + bitching to each other about people looking askance at them to let us know that at least a few "queers" are trying for an education, I wonder why they're not succeeding?

If these people are going to go to such great lengths to make themselves visible, why don't they take care not to make themselves so visibly stupid? Because if it's done in the name of gay pride then there are no rules, no boundaries, + nothing too insipid.
